LOS ANGELES TIMES

Works by local and guest artists will be showcased during the second annual Pacific Classic Equine Art Festival, continuing through Sunday.

Sixteen art galleries in north San Diego County are hosting special exhibits featuring thundering thoroughbreds and other racing scenes in honor of Del Mar's Pacific Classic Sunday.

Well-known equine artist Peter Williams, who last summer gathered inspiration at Del Mar and painted from inside the track's ivy-covered paddock, will exhibit a selection of his oil paintings at the Inn L'Auberge in Del Mar. A New Zealand native, Williams' works hang in museums around the world and in collections at Goodwood Racetrack, Chantilly and Keeneland. His painting of the Del Mar paddock will appear on the official daily racing program.

Frequent trips to the races at Del Mar also contribute to local artist Ruth Mayer's work. She can be seen every Saturday painting in front of the Ruth Mayer Fine Art Gallery in La Jolla, which will display some of her racing scenes, along with seascapes and portraits, this week.

The San Dieguito Art Guild in Leucadia is hosting a show titled "Local Landmarks, Northern County Sports and Del Mar Race Scenes" as part of the festival. Featured pieces include Jean Holloway's Cibachrome photograph "Triple Crown" and Loretta Phoenix's watercolor of Yogi Berra's baseball maxim "It's Not Over Till It's Over."
